Is your company on a tight budget? Reduce expenses and environmental impact with conferencing

By Sarah Linares
Vice President of Revenue Assurance and Product Development

With many businesses tightening up their budgets, it's time to take another look at conferencing, a powerful product that will virtually eliminate executive travel and have a big impact on your environmental footprint.

TMC's PowerTalk is a cost-effective conferencing service that makes it possible to connect with key players like they're in the same room together. Conferencing fits into everyone's budget, reducing your environmental impact without having to make expensive changes in the way you do business.

When collaborating with coworkers at other locations, you can quickly initiate a web conference to easily share reports and presentations. In-house staff training becomes effortless and both the audio and visual content can be recorded for later viewing by those unable to attend and by new hires.

While companies are all at different phases in their green missions, environmental initiatives are certainly on everyone's radar today. Because of this, reducing business travel has become a major focus of many corporate efforts. In addition to slashing costs, cutting down on travel helps reduce the size of your company's carbon footprint. It is a change that is easy to implement, is immediate, and has a big impact.

With TMC's PowerTalk, there is no commitment, no set-up or minimum monthly fees, and no reason not to have it available to your executives. Harness the capabilities of PowerTalk and streamline communication, boost productivity, slash costs, and make a critical difference in your green mission.
